Page 2— The Honorable Lisa Murkowski

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

1 /1

April 15, 2014

The Honorable Rand Paul United States Senate 124 Russell Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Paul:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction … that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable Rand Paul

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

April 15, 2014

The Honorable Rob Portman United States Senate 40 Dirksen Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Portman:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction … that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable Rob Portman

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Sincerely

April 15, 2014

The Honorable Jim Risch United States Senate 483 Russell Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Risch:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction … that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable Jim Risch

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Sincerely

April 15, 2014

The Honorable Pat Roberts United States Senate 109 Hart Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Roberts:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction … that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable Pat Roberts

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Sincerely

April 15, 2014

The Honorable Marco Rubio United States Senate 317 Hart Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Rubio:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction … that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable Marco Rubio

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

b 1/1

April 15, 2014

The Honorable Jeff Sessions United States Senate 335 Russell Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Sessions:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction … that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable Jeff Sessions

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Sincerery

April 15, 2014

The Honorable Richard Shelby United States Senate 304 Hart Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Shelby:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction … that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable Richard Shelby

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

omeerery

April 15, 2014

The Honorable John Thune United States Senate 511 Dirksen Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Thune:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction … that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable John Thune

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Tom Wheeler

April 15, 2014

The Honorable Patrick Toomey United States Senate 510 Dirksen Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Toomey:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction ... that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable Patrick Toomey

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Bally

April 15, 2014

The Honorable David Vitter United States Senate 516 Hart Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Vitter:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction … that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable David Vitter

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Sincerely

April 15, 2014

The Honorable Roger Wicker United States Senate 555 Dirksen Senate Office Building Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Wicker:

Thank you for your letter expressing concerns regarding the FCC's Critical Information Needs (CIN) study. I understand your interest, and I want to be clear that I had my own concerns regarding the proposed Research Design when I first heard of the issue in December 2013 – within the first few weeks of my Chairmanship.

The development of the Research Design was intended to aid the Commission in meeting its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act. Section 257 directs the Commission to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses in the provision and ownership of telecommunications services and information services." The statutory provision expressly links our obligation to identify market barriers with the responsibility to "promote the policies and purposes of this chapter favoring diversity of media voices." Finally, Section 257 requires the Commission to review and report to Congress on "any regulations prescribed to eliminate barriers within its jurisdiction … that can be prescribed consistent with the public interest, convenience, and necessity."

I agree with you, and others that had similar concerns, that the approach outlined in the "Qualitative Analysis" portion of the Research Design was not appropriate. As an initial first step, I asked Commission staff to eliminate – in its entirety – that portion of the study. Upon further reflection, I decided that the study should not go forward at all. This does not mean that the Commission is abandoning its obligations under Section 257, or our review of diversity issues as part of the remand from the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. I take these responsibilities seriously, and want to ensure we approach them in the proper manner by seeking public input on the best way forward, and addressing any concerns head-on.

Page 2— The Honorable Roger Wicker

our underlying responsibilities in the Communications Act – including our quadrennial review of media ownership rules.

I hope you find this information helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions.

the line